AUDITING OF CITY BOOKS

The first act and perhaps the most important of the city commissioners was the order to have the city books audited. This, it is understood, includes not only the decetion and correction of minor discrepancies that creep into almost any books during the course of a year but also suggestions as to the arrangement of a more efficient system of posting accounts than has hitherto been observed.

It is not expected that any startling results will come from the work; the new city officials are having it done so that the correct status of the city's finances may be known and made public. It is better for all concerned that a non-resident firm do the job. If for no other reason, it will prevent criticism from those who frequently audibly wonder "where the city's money is going."

Then, too, sound business policy demands a thorough check of the city records annually, even if such were not required by law. A city of the size of Middlesboro is a corporation having many complexities of accounts and the matter of having these straightened out, if there exists laxity in the system, is of interest to all of us who pay tribute to and receive benefits from the civic entity.

It is hoped that, when the work is finished, a clear and comprehensive statement of the city's assests and liabilities will be made public. Such information would doubtless be imperative, anyway, should the city desire to enter into further bonded obligations.

REGARDING GLARING AUTOMOBILE LAMPS

A number of motorists recently have registered complaints against motorists in the city who do not dim their lights in meeting other cars and it seems their point is very well taken.

The state laws provide, we are informed, that bright rays of light shall not extend more than three and one-half feet above the surface of the ground. A number of lenses used which purport to accomplish this object but they do not prevent glare in all cases.

Nearly all cars, particularly those manufactured during recent years, are equipped with dimmers and it is little or no trouble to take the glare from headlights as other vehicles approach. Many automobilists do this, of course, but others are strangers to the practice.

There is no necessity for bright, glaring headlights on the principal streets of Middlesboro where infreations of the rule have been most frequently reported.

Statistics show that accidents are constantly occurring because drivers are blinded by the headlights of another car, this condition rendering the driver unable to see where he is going.

The large and ever-increasing number of automobiles makes it necessary that each motorist be considerate of his fellow man and it is for their mutual interest to take any reasonable precaution that will minimize the hazards of driving.

Today is Groundhog Day but not a holiday else the bank clerks would know it.

The price of crude oil continues to advance. Perhaps it will decline when local oil promoters begin to put products on the market.

Despite the amount of Teapot Dome oil sales, the investigation at Washington is conducted with considerable friction.

The city is a soulless corporation, technically speaking, but this does not mean that its agents enjoy selling realty or personal property for tax payments. They would far rather such debts be paid before they are forced to this extremity.

In a recent case in civil court, about 30 men gave a half day's service to a trial in which the judgment was one dollar. Surely such frivolous difficulties could be settled out of court. Expert and conscientious legal advice could do much toward saving the time of the court for really important matters.

The East End detour is becoming almost impassable again. The city recently paid for the hauling of over 50 loads of slag to improve the two blocks connecting the city proper with the West End. Wonder if it couldn't also do something for the road which not only serves a considerable part of our population but also forms ingress and egress to the two adjoining states?

However, comma—

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—A play that has a strong final curtain scene is as rare on Broadway as a walking stick in Omaha. Even in "Outward Bound," the best play of the season, the last act is considerably weaker than the first two. And Shaw's gorgeous "St. Joan" is marred with a silly epilogue.

And so when a play such as Clemence Dane's "The Way Things Happen" comes to town there is cause for rejoicing. The final curtain comes down upon a rousing situation, upon a great conflict of emotions. It is by far the most stirring moment of the play.

A girl has sacrificed and suffered for the man she loves. They arrive at the place where he must realize his obligation to the girl, or allow her to part from him.

There is nothing especially new in this situation, but it gains force through the manner in which Miss Dane has handled the details of action. She converts a woman's cry of hate into an avowal of love, which it usually is. And in the moment of the man's regeneration the curtain comes down.

This play is by no means so substantial a work as either "Will Shakespeare" or "A Bill of Divorcement," two plays by Miss Dane which met with only indifferent success in the United States. However, the very effective final scene of "The Way Things Happen" promises for it a greater success than was attained by the playwright's previous plays.

Katherine Cornell, as the heroine of "The Way Things Happen," scores one of the big individual successes of the season. In two short years she has forged to the front rank of actresses. One reviewer calls her the Duse of this generation. Another says she is the best actress on the stage. Fulsome praise, perhaps, but Miss Cornell is headed for a place in the regard of the public as secure as that attained by Ethel Barrymore, Jane Cowl and Laurette Taylor.

But being a performer of the stage only, she will never achieve the popularity of such a screen actress as, for instance, Mary Pickford.

New York rejoices at the return of Fritz Kreisler, master fiddler of the age. Seats to his recital were sold out a week in advance. Carnegie Hall could not hold all who came to hear him.

This writer knows practically nothing of the technique of music, but it is his impression that Kreisler better than any other instrumentalist can convey to the listening audience the beauty that was in the heart of the composer as he wrote.

Kreisler removes his own individuality from the stage until it seems that only a little red box, with a few strings across it, is there to create beauty under divine direction.

CALLISON'S IMPROVING THEIR STORE BUILDING

Work of making a new floor on the first floor of the W. J. Callison store began today. A balcony will be built at the rear of the store over the office. The improvement will add greatly to the appearance of the store and provide an attractive place for the display of furnishings.

Kiddies Enjoy Jumping Rabbit

The new White Star confectionery store was a Mecca for children yesterday afternoon. The proprietor gave candy to the kiddies and brought screams of laughter from them by giving exhibitions of the jumping rabbit, operated by a pneumatic tube.

THIS LITTLE WORLD

LONDON, Feb. 2.—London had a real snow the other day and was as excited about it as a hen is about her first chick. We have had no snow here for five years or more. Occasionally there has been a flurry which melted as soon as it struck the ground. But this snow stuck. It covered the roofs, the trees and the sidewalks.

Then the poetry of it passed away and the prose of snot and muck and slop was more than evident. London literally threw up its hands and didn't know what to do. There is unlimited unemployment here, but no great gangs of men were enrolled to get rid of the snow as is done in New York.

Children and the photographers enjoyed the snow, but busy London cussed it and hoped it would not return for another five years.

Here's a new dinner table story about Marshal Joffre.

A pretty woman called his attention to recent books and articles seeking to take away from him the glory of being the hero of the Marne and attributing that world-important victory to other generals. Joffre looked dreamily at the ceiling and softly mumbled:

"If the first Marne had been a great defeat instead of a victory, I wonder whether they would have been so anxious to take it away from me."

Rev. W. A. Spooner recently decided to retire as warden of New College, Oxford. He is a great scholar, executive and teacher, but he will probably be known to fame because his name is embalmed in the dictionary:

"Spoonerism (from the name of Rev. W. A. Spooner)—the accidental transposition of the initial sounds or other parts of two or more words."

Dr. Spooner just couldn't get them straight. Early in his career he puzzled a news-stand salesman by asking for "The Leading Mourner" when he meant the "Morning Leader."

One Sunday during church service he stepped up politely to a strange woman and said:

"Pardon me, Madam, you are occupewing my pie." He was trying to say "occupying my pew."

Sad Monkey Takes Dope, Perks Up, Takes Interest

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—"Dopey Dan," sad faced and melancholy monkey, has been called upon to answer for science this interesting question: Is a monkey imaginative, even under the influence of drugs?

In other words, can an ordinary zoo variety of short-tailed simian conjure up dreams of a peanut-laden jungle?

Wherefore, "Dopey Dan" and a little company of fellow martyrs to the human race have been getting regular "shots" of narcotics for almost a year.

That the result of this experiment may benefit the human race is no salve to Dan's spirits.

The U. S. Public Health Service desires to know whether a drug addict returns to "dope" because of actual physical need or because he imagines the need. A successful answer may cure millions of drug addicts.

But "Dopey Dan" merely sulks, disconsolate, in the corner of his cage in the health service laboratory. His narcotic supply has suddenly been stopped. His sad face seems to say that it isn't fair to teach a monkey to expect a "shot" and then deprive him of it.

But Dan really doesn't know what it's all about, declares Dr. A. G. Du Mez, who, with Dr. Kolb, is conducting the experiments.

"I doubt that Dan can even associate the hypodermic needle with the resulting sensations," says the doctor. His monkey brain stores no resentment, he adds.

The experiments began about 10 months ago. Monkeys were used because drug addicts cannot be depended upon to tell the truth. Invariably they exaggerate or lie, Dr. Du Mez points out.

So Dopey Dan and a bunch of his fellows were rounded up—"Katie," "Morphine Mike," Kodeine Mary" and eight others. Katy, but recently fallen from the trees of zoological righteousness, is at present in the throes of paralysis, induced by drugs.

As to the experimental matters the monkeys are expected to assimilate the drug, survive it and eventually be returned to normal.

Dan, it has been found, runs from the "hypo."

"However, after an injection he brightens up and busily occupies himself with his fleas. He gets perky, like a human being would, and, if he does think, probably imagines jungle orgies," says the doctor.

"After the effect wears off he settles down and suffers his fleas. If he had thoughts he would imagine he wanted dope, and he would screech for it, and recognize the needle.

Berton Braley's Poem

DWELLING PLACES

The Palaces of Hium, of Nineveh and Tyre
Were doubtless very wonderful and gorgeous to behold,
Upholstered in magnificence to please a king's desire
With heavy silken trappings and with jewels and with gold.

The Palaces of Syharis, the Palaces of Rome,
The Castles of King Arthur or of Russian Katherine
And other famous palaces where monarchs made their home
Were mighty, rich and sumptuous but not exactly clean.

The oriental potentates or barons of the west
Who dwelt in edifices of imperial design,
With many slaves and servitors to answer their behest.
Did not possess a palace with the luxury of mine.

I dwell in lofty eminence above a city street,
I speak across the distances upon a throbbing wire,
For light, I push a button, and the radiator's heat
Has got it over anything King Arthur could acquire.

There wasn't any plumbing in those palaces of old,
And when it comes to comfort I am pretty certain that
Those emperors and potentates would marvel to behold
The clean and cozy snugness of my little city flat.

A WARM RIDDLE

They come in out of the storm

"Ho, Ho, Missez Cross Patch," said the Riddle Lady next day. "Here is a riddle for you to guess. It's the place where you like to sit and spin. But I never did think you were as selfish as the piece about you says."

"I'm glad you don't," answered Missez Cross Patch gratefully. "For really I just love to have company in to tea. I never drink it up and then ask in the neighbors. But what is the riddle?"

"Crackle! Crackle! What am I?
Winking with my cherry eye,
Beckoning you to come to tea,
And sup with pussy-cat and me.

"Pussy purrs the loveliest tunes
In the winter afternoons.
We don't bother with the weather,
We love so to be together.

"And the kettle—you should hear it!
I just love to be so near it.
Sings away down in his nose.
H'm! H'm! That's how he goes!

"If you come we'll have some toast,
I make that nicely (It's my boast).
As I hiss and spark and sputter,
Will you please spread on the butter?

"Old Jack Frost just cannot bear me,
But I never let him scare me,
As he roars along the street,
Nipping kiddies' hands and feet.

"They come in out of the storm
And run to me to keep them warm.
As I roar and flash and hiss,
They know that it's just a kiss.

"I'm the cook's most trusted friend.
I bake things for her without end.
But the stove's no place for me,
I love the hearth where folk have tea.

"Where pussy purrs and kettle sings,
And people talk of many things,
And kiddies come and warm their toes,
And shake the snowflakes off their clothes.

"I can guess what it is," whispered Humpty Dumpty to Nancy. "But it's a name I don't care to mention. Something that is just as bad for an egg as a stone-wall. In fact when the Riddle Lady mentioned toast I had to groan. For it can poach an egg and put it on toast and boast about it."

"Then it is a fire," said Nancy. "I thought so."

But she said it loud enough for everybody to hear.

"I was just going to say the answer," spoke up Missez Cross Patch tartly. "And now you've spoiled my chance for a prize."

But just then she caught the Riddle Lady's eye. "I mean," she corrected herself, "that I am very glad you guessed the answer."

"That's right," smiled the Riddle Lady. "And I'm going to give you the prize instead of Nancy. It's a nice copper tea-kettle. Now you can have all the tea parties you want, and invite the Twins."

SISTER Mary's KITCHEN

Casserole Dishes

(Unless otherwise specified, these recipes are planned for four persons).

Casserole cookery saves much dish washing and the need of "dishing up" at the last minute when there are always so many things to do in the preparation of a meal.

Plan to use the oven heat to cook the dessert if fuel is an item for economy.

Cheap cuts of meat can be utilized in a casserole with satisfactory results.

There is very little waste to foods cooked in a casserole.

Hot Pot of Hodge Podge

One and one-half pounds neck or loin of mutton, 4 potatoes, 1 large onion, 2 tablespoons bacon fat, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, salt and pepper.

Wash, peel and slice potatoes. Peel and slice onion. Melt fat in frying pan, add onion and saute a pale straw color. Remove onion to casserole and add potatoes to fat. Brown slightly. Put in layer of potatoes in casserole. Trim meat and cut in neat pieces for serving. Saute a light brown on both sides in bacon fat. Put a layer of meat on potatoes. Season with salt, pepper and parsley. Continue layer for layer of potatoes until all is used. Add one cup boiling water, cover closely and cook two hours in a moderate oven.

Casserole of Veal

One pound lean veal, 1 pound smoked ham, 1 tablespoon bacon fat, 16 small onions, 1 cup canned tomatoes, 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon celery salt, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon pepper, 2 cups diced potatoes, 2 tablespoons flour.

Trim off fat from ham and try out in frying pan. Cut ham in matchlike strips and brown in fat. Mix salt, flour and pepper. Cut veal in dice and roll in flour mixture. Add bacon fat to ham fat and brown the meat quickly on all sides. Wash and peel onions and brown in fat in a rich dark stew is desired. Put meat, onions and potatoe cubes in casserole. Add tomatoes, water and celery salt to fat in frying pan. Bring to the boiling point and pour over contents of casserole. Cover and cook one and one-half hours in a moderate oven.

Pork Chops and Apples

Sprinkle pork chops with salt and pepper. Pare and core apples and cut in rings about half an inch thick. Put a layer of apples in a lightly buttered casserole, sprinkle sparingly with powdered sugar and a dash of powdered cloves. Add one-half teaspoon minced onion and cover with pork chops. Continue layer for layer until the sufficient number of chops are used. The last layer should be of apples. Add just enough water to prevent burning.

CHAS. O. BROWN, Managing Director, Manring Theatre

A Typical Newspaper Review of Blackstone Show. What Lansing State Journal Said:

THE GREAT BLACKSTONE

I went over to see The Great Blackstone Sunday afternoon.

Well, sir, he made a real live horse disappear right in front of your eyes, got a whole barnyard full of animals from an empty packing box, caught pigeons out of the air with a landing net, did card tricks slicker than you have ever seen done before and had an awful time with a little girl in a red and white gingham dress. He gave the little girl a rabbit and offered to wrap it up for her, but she had evidently seen Blackston before because she said not to bother. So Blackstone wrapped it up anyway and turned it into a box of candy. The little girl appeared a little peeved and seemed inclined to stick for a finish so Blackstone took the wrapping paper and made the rabbit appear again and gave it back to the little girl to keep.

Another little boy nearly got himself in bad by "giving" Blackstone a watch instead of "loaning" it to him, but they finally found it again all tied up in the bottom of about seven trunks, each of which was inside of another. The little boy got the watch back.

It was pretty good when Blackstone got a whole flock of East Lansing Ducks out of a bucket of water and again when he borrowed a handkerchief from a fat man in the third row and made it dance all around the stage. One of the most magical things he did was to give the audience an idea of what a bachelor spends his time thinking about. "The Bachelor's Dream," he called it, turned out to be quite an eye full.

But in all seriousness, Blackstone is a real magician. He does not resort to the old time methods, but presents his show in a most modern manner and his business-like methods serve to disarm suspicion and you are able to sit back and enjoy the show without any feeling of antagonism whatsoever. You are willing to watch him and you have no desire to overtax your brain in a vain effort to solve his mysteries or fathom his necromancy.

Blackstone is a smooth-working gentleman, making a special play for the children. He gives them magic that recalls, mystifies and makes them laugh. In fact the Blackstone show probably holds more laughs, either from the tricks or the audience and sometimes both than any single whole evening magician has ever been able to produce.

Blackstone starts off easily, running his show without a single hitch or a single wait. You will be relieved to know that he does not take up half of his running time with coin palming and card manipulation. He does just enough to convince you that he can do all the things you have ever seen done before, only much better. Content with that, he introduces rapidly his many illusions and the truly big effects which he carries. His is, without a doubt, one of the heaviest shows of its kind on the road today. He has tricks, illusions, magical apparatus and stage props without end and there are no waits nor pauses. His dramatic effect is secured by the actual execution of his tricks and he never depends upon claptrap or artificial means to make his impression.

His disappearing horse is just about the greatest illusion ever attempted. It will give you something to think about for some time to come. Sufficient to say that you had better get a firm grip on your false teeth or you are likely to have to borrow the usher's flashlight to find them.

It would be impossible to list all of the startling things which Blackstone does. It would be equally impossible to tell you what he is going to do—and anyway that is a job for the press agent. You will like to know, however, that Blackstone changes his show every day. You can go every day this week and see something different. There will be special nights for special things and if you once go, you will doubtless go back again before the week is over. To sum it all up: Blackstone is just about the best you have ever seen. Don't miss him.

HOW JEWS HAVE TURNED PALESTINE'S DESERT INTO OASIS OF FRUITFUL FARMS

THE ABOVE PHOTOS GRAPHICALLY ILLUSTRATE THE PROGRESS MADE BY THE JEWS IN TURNING THE SANDS OF PALESTINE INTO FRUITFUL FARMS AND THRIVING CITIES. PHOTO ON UPPER LEFT, THE LAYING OF THE CORNERSTONE OF TEL-AVIV IN 1909; UPPER RIGHT HERZL ST., THE MAIN STREET OF TEL-AVIV TODAY; LEFT CENTER, ONE OF THE FIRST JEWISH MILKMAIDS SINCE BIBLICAL TIMES; RIGHT CENTER, REAPING WHERE THE DESERT USED TO BLOOM; AND BOTTOM, THE MODERN HIGH SCHOOL IN TEL-AVIV.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Orange groves and vineyards and wheat fields where they have not been seen for centuries.

Up-to-date American roadmaking, farm-reaping and fruit-growing methods in a land where the primitive plow has been the rule.

Bare hills planted with forests, shifting sands held tight by the planting of the eucalyptus, marshes drained, and metalled roads built.

A whole comprehensive school system, running from kindergartens clear up to a national university.

Tel-Aviv, a town of 15,000 inhabitants created as Gary, Ind., was, where once were sand dunes.

These are the outstanding achievements of the Zionist movement which aims to make Palestine a national home for the Jews. It has been done by Jewish money and Jewish muscle under the aegis and protection of the British government which holds the mandate for the Holy land. What has been accomplished is but a scratch on the surface, but it has fired the enthusiasts to do more.

Impelled by this vision, undeterred by the prospect of hard, unremitting pioneer toil, unfrightened by heat, by drifting sands and by hostile Arabs, 35,000 Jews from all parts of the world have poured into Palestine since February, 1919.

There would have been five times that number had the Zionist organization and the British government been willing. But both have been insistent that there must be a job for every immigrant. Hence a checking system threefold as rigid as that applied by our Uncle Sam at Ellis Island.

Most of the immigrants are young men ranging from 20 to 30 who leave with their young families. They are mainly men who have served in the armies of their country and who have already either worked as farmers or mechanics or at useful crafts. And all are idealists.

In one period of 18 months, 14958 Jews were admitted to Palestine. They came from 43 different countries and spoke almost as many languages. The chief countries of origin were: Poland, 4150; Russia, 2088; Ukraine, 2452; Lithuania, 646; Rumania, 646; Turkey, 582 and Morocco, 520. Only 278 came from America.

When these Jews land in Palestine they are immediately taken care of at labor camps where the men are put to work as manual laborers. In this way 50 miles of roads, 10 miles of railway, a bridge over the Jordan and other things have been accomplished. Others are employed in house building. They are then gradually settled on the land.

The Zionists have 55 colonies comprising about 175,000 acres of arable land in such classical places as the vale of Sharon, Sharia, Galilee and the great plain where Armageddon was fought. The total population of Palestine is 757,890 of whom 83,794 are Jews and 73,024 Christians.

It is estimated the country could easily support 3,00,000 when properly cultivated. The arable are of Palestine is estimated at 12,000 square miles of which only 4,000 are in use. So it can be seen how little the Zionists own up to the present.

All their land has been purchased from the Arabs. It is not sold to the Jewish settlers. They get it on a system of permanent lease, the land, as a whole, being held as Jewish national land.

In some communities the workmen farmers have cooperative communities. It is the vision of the Zionists that their holdings shall once more be given over to the cultivation of oranges, olives, citron, grapes, wheat and barley. Professor Elwood Mead of University of California has surveyed their activities and is preparing an optimistic report.

Tel-Aviv

Ever hear of Tel-Aviv?

No, it is not a new detrifice, digestion cure or patent medicine of any kind. It's the name of a town.

It's the Gary of Palestine.

Just as the directors of the United States Steel Corporation said—"Let's build a city on these flat plains of Indiana near Lake Michigan"—and it was done, so the Zionist Jews decreed a new town on the shores of the Mediterranean and it duly came to life.

The cornerstone was laid with Jewish rites and prayers 13 years ago in what appeared to be a hopeless waste of shifting sand dunes. Today it is a thriving, bustling Jewish city of 15,000.

The work of setting up farms, building homes and roads and establishing schools is something like the early pioneer story of Utah. Like our early settlers everywhere, these Palestinian Jews are strong on schools. They have today 131 of all kinds, with 674 teachers and 12,456 pupils.

Just as our job with our melting pot is to teach the children to speak English, so in this new melting pot of Jewry the kids are being taught Hebrew instead of the tongues of Europe, Africa and Asia. In the towns Jews settle as artisans. Land has been bought and new working class suburbs planned for Jerusalem, Jaffa and Tiberians.

It's a common mistake to think that under the British mandate Jews rule the land. The administration is a British administration under a high commissioner. The present one, who is the first, is Sir Herbert Samuel, a Jew, but most of the other high offices are held by non-Jews. The British plan was for some sort of executive assembly composed mainly of Molsems, but containing also Jews and Christians. Owing to Arab opposition this has so far fallen through.

BENCHES ON VACANT LOT REMOVED TO NEW SUBURBAN CHURCH

Gentlemen of leisure who have been accustomed to sitting on the benches on the vacant lot at the corner of Cumberland avenue and Nineteenth street must now find other places to while away the time by discussing politics, whittling and eating peanuts.

The benches are gone and a strange spirit of emptiness seems to pervade the place. There are now other seats to take their places and the erstwhile loungers are constrained to seek rest elsewhere.

As important as is the use of the seats at the improvised park, the valt of the church is greater. The benches, the property of the First Baptist church, have been taken to a new church building in a suburban section, there to be used as pews until more substantial and dignified places of rest can be formed. There are several other benches in vacant places of Middlesboro which belong to the church and are also being commandeered.

Patrons of the little park are assured that there is no cause for worry, however. The benches have lost a considerable portion of their popularity during the cold weather, anyhow. They will be returned, or others provided, ere the advent of spring when the park will burst forth in verdant beauty.

NEWS FROM HARLAN AND VICINITY

MINE UNION BOOKS STOLEN

Office At Harlan Looted Of Records; Dynamite Left There January 1

HARLAN, Ky., Feb. 2.—Someone using a skeleton key entered the office of the United Mine Workers in the Jones Building here and stole the cash book and general ledgers, besides the minute books of six locals situated out in the county.

At a number of mines the mine workers are not sufficiently strong to maintain their own headquarters and their records are kept at the headquarters here in Harlan. George Cecil and Frank Davis, who were in charge of the headquarters, entered the office and failed to notice anything wrong until they opened the desk and sought the ledger. It was missing and a search revealed that it, a general cash book and the six minute books were all missing. Nothing else was disturbed.

On January 1 of this year a stick of dynamite with cap attached was found hanging to the building where the Mine Workers' headquarters is located.

Since that time none of the officials of the union have slept in the headquarters. Officials in charge of the headquarters stated that the taking of the records could serve no purpose except reveal the names of persons who were members of the union.

The officers were in the house of Dave Middleston when Carlow Whitehead appeared, with a lunch basket and three one-gallon jugs. About one and one-half bushel of malt corn and a meat grinder which was used to grind the corn were found by the officers after a thorough search.

SHORTCOMINGS OF KENTUCKY FINANCE GIVEN

regards the office of State Inspector and Examiner is that the information collected through two years of work is now not made use of to any appreciable extent, and in no way meets the budget needs. The relatively small change to create a Budget Office will preserve and greatly extend the usefulness of the present office. It is a change which should be made as soon as practicable.

Proposed Improvements

Other organization recommendations look toward the eventual establishment of the two principal financial offices believed to be essential to the best administration of financial affairs of a State and other Government. These are (1) an audit office independent of the administration but responsible to a continuing body that can require an adequate discharge of the duties of the office, viz. the Legislature, and (2) a single Finance Department directed by the principal member of the Governor's appointed cabinet.

Other proposed improvements requiring legislation:

1. To require all receipts and balances of the departments to be deposited in the treasury and the constitution of the imprest fund system for that of having department and institution treasuries.

2. To prohibit the issue of interest-bearing warrants and to authorize the issue by the Treasurer, Auditor, of Public Accounts, and Governor, of revenue bonds (1) in anticipation of tax collections in amount not to exceed say, 40 per cent of the total as estimated by the Budget Commission and (2) to meet the Treasury deficit at and before the end of the fiscal year as estimated by the Budget Commission. The borrowing should be limited to requirements month by month.

3. To curtail the special fund system so far as this is now practical, incidentally to make it clear that inheritance tax receipts are to be deposited in the general fund.

4. To improve the audit procedure for revenues and expenditures.

5. To provide for the complete revision of accounting methods in the central offices and securing of adequate accounting there and in all departments.

6. To require detailed certified time reports as vouchers for salary payments, limitations upon vacations and leaves to be set by the Budget Commission, regulations as to working hours, forms of time records, and procedure as to attendance and leaves to be prepared or approved by the Budget Commission.

7. To require definite accountability for property.

Must Bleach Jack Rock

"Section 8. Each and every operator shall report under oath quarterly and oftener if required, by the fire marshal or commission, the profits made by him, it or them, on coal mined for the previous three months, and fifty per cent of said profit shall be paid into the treasury of the state for the benefit of the insane asylums and a ward shall be maintained therein at all times, sufficiently commodious to care for such of said operators as may lose their mines or minds.

"Section 9. All slate and jack rock, shall be separated from the coal by the said operators; the slate polished and delivered to the superintendent of public instruction for the use of the school children of the state; and the jack rock bleached and delivered to the state road commission, f. o. b. for the purpose of macadamizing the primary system of good roads.

"Section 10. Every operator shall keep in his employ at all times a sufficient clerical force and attorneys (not less than one hundred) to answer intelligently or evasively, or both, all questionnaires propounded by the state and federal governments from time to time or all the time.

"Section 11. The word operator as used in this act shall not be construed to mean such nuts, boobs or "poor fish" who may have from time to time invested their money in the coal business under the misguided assumption that they were aiding in the development of the mineral resources of the state, and would be permitted to recover and receive a fair return upon their investment, without being slandered, harassed, bewildered, bedevilled and bedamned.

"Section 12. Whereas there is a doubt whether the proposed bond issue of seventy-five million dollars may be enacted by the general assembly, or if enacted, whether the same will be approved by the people at the polls, in which event there will be a deficit and urgent need of funds to defray the expenses of the state government, and to compensate the aforesaid commission for extinguishing and exterminating the coal business, an emergency is declared to exist, and this act shall become a law and be effective from and after its passage."

CHANGE OF LIFE
Florida Lady Was in a Miserable Condition, But Says She Found Cardui Helpful, and Got Well.

Altha, Fla.—In explaining how she found Cardui so helpful during change of life, Mrs. Ella M. Bailey, of Route 2, this place, said:

"I became so weakened it was an effort for me to get around. I knew what was the matter, but I felt like I couldn't give up.

"I just dragged, and I certainly was nervous. I was so restless I could not sit down long—yet so weak I couldn't get about. It is a most miserable and such a helpless feeling.

"I would get depressed and out of heart.

"I began to feel, after awhile, there was no use to try to get well. This is all wrong, for it makes a person worse.

"I had heard of Cardui, and thought it might strengthen me. A neighbor had used it with good results.

"I took one bottle (of Cardui), then I saw I wasn't so nervous, so kept it up.

"Gradually the nervousness left me, I began to eat and sleep better. Was soon well, and all right. Cardui did wonders for me, and I certainly do recommend it."

Thousands of other women have written, to tell of the beneficial results obtained by taking Cardui, and to recommend it to others.

LONG DISTANCE CAMPAIGNING WINS VOTES FOR CANDIDATE ABROAD

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Feb. 1.—Here's a hunch for political aspirants the country over:

If you want to get votes for election to office, leave home and take a trip abroad.

A hopeful politician here tried it and found it worked fine. And now he passes along the tip to all others—except his own opponent for office.

You see, Robert R. Reynolds, called "Bob" in these parts, had been a varsity football player, newspaper reporter, broncho buster, lawyer and prosecuting attorney. But all that didn't appease his taste for excitement. So he decided to become a politician and announced his candidacy for the lieutenant governorship of the state.

Then, instead of swinging around the circuit making stump speeches appealing for votes, he built himself a little home on a flivver chassis and set out for a trip around the world.

Long Distance Campaign

He has just come back from a five-months' tour, accompanied by a cameraman who shot about 20,000 feet of movie film, while Bob shot back thousands of appeals for votes.

The main idea behind the venture was not pictorial but political.

"And it sure has worked," says Reynolds. "For it's like this: If John Smith in the hills of North Carolina gets political propaganda from me at Asheville, he's likely to toss it into the fire without even reading it.

"But if he gets a letter postmarked Yokohama or Paris, or some other place away off on the other side of the world, he's going to open it, and read, you can bet!

"He's also going to think that Bob Reynolds is mighty thoughtful to remember him and go to the trouble of writing.

"Guess I'd better vote for Bob when election comes around,' is the resulting mental resolve."

ROBERT R. REYNOLDS, CANDIDATE FOR THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNORSHIP OF NORTH CAROLINA AND THE FLIVVER IN WHICH HE MADE HIS CAMPAIGN THOUSANDS OF MILES FROM HOME.

Reynolds mailed more than 5,000 letters and cards to the folks back in North Carolina. And, of course, he didn't forget to mention the little matter of his candidacy in any of them.

In all the political aspirant covered 30,000 miles on the trip, 8,000 of them being made by auto.

Some of the movies that were made will be used in commercial news weeklies, but most of them will be exhibited in North Carolina schools and colleges.

And it's probable that the movie shows will take up Reynold's campaign where the foreign mail left off.
